

Quimet Assists Jock Hutchison In British Rout

Americans Administer Worst Drubbing Suffered Here by Mitchell and Duncanson

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 17.—With Francis Ouimet playing the type of golf that won him the national open championship in 1913, the American combination of Ouimet and Jack Hutchinson to-day administered to the invading Britishers, Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, the worst defeat the latter pair has yet experienced.

The American team won their third-round match with the Country Club to-day by the score of 7 up and 5 to play, and in both morning and afternoon rounds their best ball score for the eighteen holes was 68 to the 71 scored by the British team in the morning round and the 72 tallied by them in the afternoon.

In the morning play the Americans took the lead at the first hole, and by winning the seventh, tenth, eleventh and thirteenth gained a lead of five up before the Britishers were able to win a hole. The Mitchell-Duncan team then took the fourteenth and seventeenth, cutting the lead of the Americans to three up at the end of the morning round. By taking the third, seventh, twelfth and thirteenth in the afternoon round the Americans won.

Quimet's all-around play proved the outstanding feature of the morning round, while he and Hutchison shared honors in the afternoon. Holing a 40-foot putt on the tenth hole of the morning round was one of Quimet's many great plays of the day.

The match was the twenty-fifth played by the British combination since the recent open championship tournament, and marked the third defeat sustained by them.
